1. Website ACROPOLIS

In order to inform the public and share information with project members the ACROPOLIS website was developed.

After defining the requirements, the website was developed by the ICT department of the National Institute for Public Health and the Environment (RIVM). The website can be maintained by using a CMS (Content Management System) called NetWriter, which was also developed by the ICT department of RIVM.

The website can be found on: <http://www.acropolis-eu.com/>. The website consists of two parts: a public part accessible for everyone and a restricted-access area.

On the public part of the website (Figure 1) you can find on the left hand side a menu. By clicking on one of the menu items, detailed information on this item will appear on the main part of the page. The menu items will be extended during the project if needed.

At the top of the right hand side, the user can find on a 'Login/Logout' button (Figure 1). This can be used by project partners to access the restricted part of the website via the use of a username and password (Figure 2).

The restricted part of the ACROPOLIS website looks the same as the public part (Figure 3). This part contains background and working documents which are only meant for the partners of the project. On this part the menu items will also be extended during the course of project.
